Old Weir Bridge. This bridge connects Dinis Island with the mainland, and consists of two arches, only one of which, however, is navigable. At this point the waters of the Upper Lake rush down some rapids (easily negotiated by boatmen) for a fall of about four feet, and merge themselves into the Lower Lake. It is a scene of great beauty.

I regret to miss this card so it is stale. I need your card but don't know how to get it. I am sure I will be glad to get it when I see you. I will be coming. I do feel
 today
 been
 a nice
 time.

Hello Helen! - Am
sure having a nice
time. Eating food
the chicken & going out interesting. Shall write you a letter later.
Don't you want a
slice of this watermelon we are going to eat? How are the kids? Have you
any pictures since photo.
you know who I mean.
Loveably Maye.
